

SUMMER STORY CAMP WORKSHOPS

One Up! Solo classes are small: 4-6 students max. Each class is designed to give students the time and attention this kind of work requires. For this reason, a brief, painless interview is required for all perspective students.

June 30th 3:30-5:30 pm

July 7th 3:30- 5:30 pm

Each week we introduce an element of solo show structure through a series of fun interactive exercises and fun assignments. We'll look at a variety of solo show formats with assigned reading/viewing links. Each week students will present work in a positive environment designed to nurture the green shoots of your creativity.

SUMMER STORY CAMP WORKSHOPS

Students get individually focused workshop time each week to develop a solo show premise into a directed, rehearsed and polished 20-minute solo show (or excerpt of a longer show). Like One Up! Intro, there will be interactive exercises to reinforce story structure and fun assignments that are linked to what students present in each class. Often students repeat this class to develop other sections of their show or refine existing pieces until they have enough material to take One Up! Ready, a 12 week class designed for you to finish your show! (One Up! Ready Class dates tbd)

How payment works:

Down payment is due to reserve your spot asap, 2nd installment due at the midpoint of each class.

Cancellation policy: Even though we allow fee installments, it is understood that if you sign up for a class the entire fee is due regardless if you finish the class or not. Read more about our policy here.

What goes into a press release? Can I write and send my own? How do you get press to notice? How are they used for different things? HOW DO YOU DO THIS?!

These topics will be tackled at Pete's 90-minute, interactive, idea-generating, press release Zoom workshop which aims to empower you to do your own press. Pete's been doing his own press for 10 years and his stories and shows have been featured in The New York Times, TimeOut, and just about everywhere in-between.

We'll discuss the basics, and together we'll investigate creating creative press releases, generating press-worthy ideas, making old pitches and PRs fresh, and figuring out who your audience is. We'll discover and discuss effective ways to get the word out about your show, song, product, event, etc. Plus, you'll receive access to press release templates and press release/story pitch samples. Let's DO THIS.

NEXT SESSION Soon! Standby we're figuring it out!!!
